Ray Le Pivert originally submitted the report on the administration of the census and the list of Districts and Enumerators for a Journal article but we commandeered it for this publication.

As with any undertaking of this nature there will be mistakes, some in the transcription, others in the inability of the enumerators to spell or write legibly. Question marks indicate illegible words that either defeated us completely, or have been interpreted as best we can manage.

Some Christian names have been Anglicised, Marie to Mary, Jean to John and Guillaume to William for instance, depending on the native language of the enumerator and it is possible this has also happened the other way around!

Watch out for a number of different spellings of the same name - Houillebecq/Houillebecq/Houillebecq being a prime example. Some names were too long to fit in space provided and have been abbreviated, see the list appended on page 5.

A last word of caution, before you dive in please read the instructions!!

Jersey Shipping Schedule

(Civil Parishes St Helier and St Martin)

Including the Mistletoe R.N.

Administration of the Census by Ray Le Pivert

The Lieutenant Governor, Lt. Gen. Charles Brisbane Ewart, C.B., R.E. instructed the Bailiff to return a census of the Island of Jersey to Her Majesty's Britannic Government, for the year 1891.

On the 5th February of that year, the States of Jersey voted, by the fairly small majority of 25 pour to 17 contre, in favour and set the agenda to discuss this - the sixth consecutive decennial census, on the 9th March. At this sitting, it was proposed the completed schedules be sent to the General Registrar, rather than to the Census Office at Somerset House; this was seconded and lodged au Greffe. It was also put to the House that the British Government would contribute and supply printed Schedules and Census Sheets headed, "Census of Islands in the British Seas, 1891", but all other expenses must be borne by the States of Jersey.

Elementary Schools

The Rector of St Mary, the Rev. Edward Luce, proposed that children attending elementary school also be counted with the population of Jersey, as it was believed many children did not attend any school whatsoever. "It is time", continued the Rector, "that a solution to this problem be found." Compulsory education had been made law only two years earlier and, except for the Ragged School, was with a nominal charge. It was not until 1907 that all elementary education was finally deemed free, i.e. funded by the States. The States decided that the census of children be undertaken by the head teachers of the schools and included in the general Census.

The States proceedings for the 31st March 1891 show the Rector of Grouville, Edward Le Feuvre, standing to announce that he did not know if this was the proper moment to say, but he desired to point out that all States Members should, by the Census Law, remain in their houses throughout Monday next. [Laughter.] The Constable of St Helier, Philippe Baudains stood to inquire whether it would be possible to alter the date of next Tuesday's sitting as the different Constable would be busily engaged on census work. The President said that would be difficult! At the sitting of the States on 1st April 1891, it was finally decided to conduct the census for the same night as the rest of the British Isle, Sunday 5th April/Monday 6th April.

The Enumerators

With the redoubtable Philippe Baudains having the most difficult task, all Parish Constables were nominate as Chief Enumerators. They were to choose capable persons to act as enumerators within their parish. These latter, of necessity, would be both numerate and literate, mature and, though unsaid, male. In 1891, these qualifications together, somewhat limited the available workforce. With the exception of the Town Districts, the great majority of Enumerators selected were resident within their District as well as their Parish, although, in one case, Philip Duval from St Mary assisted in the neighbouring Parish of St Peter. Most of the Parish Vingteniers were to be Enumerators, and in total some one hundred and thirty five Enumerators were selected throughout the Island. The Parish Constable of St John's son, 18 year old Herbert Falla, appears to be the youngest; Jean Buesnel, a retired contractor from St Saviour at 71 years, the oldest.

Each Parish Constable divided his parish in districts to contain generally between 300 and 500 persons (in the rural areas) and somewhat more in the town. He also devised a short description of the district for the Census District Sheets, but obviously must have briefed his Enumerators in considerably more detail, for these recorded descriptions are rather sketchy.

'Margin' Notes

Of interest today are some short notes - for example in the Havre des Pas area "Many houses have been built in this district during the last ten years. It has become the fashionable quarter of the town and many families have taken their residence in it." This can be compared historically with the 1851 Census note for the adjoining district in the Vingtaine de Petite Longueville "... the village of George Town is built in a low marshy ground and has no peculiar feature of its own. It is chiefly inhabited by people of the middle or lower classes of society, whose limited incomes compel them as it were to keep near their daily occupation and at a few minutes walk from the market. As we proceed either north or east of this village we find more salubrious dwelling houses where the wealthy make their abode.”

The Schedules

During the week ending Saturday 4th April, Enumerators were to deliver to each household a schedule and charge that the head of the house complete it for census night - or suffer a £2 penalty. Article 6 of the Census Law read: “Each family Head or Occupier of a house who has received a Schedule is obliged to fill in that Schedule with details of every person who spent the night of 5/6th April 1891 in the house.” There must have been a few occasion where the enumerator would need to give assistance in some household, perhaps some more willing than others. The schedules were to be collected on the Monday and the details entered into the special books. Within the ten days following, the Chief Enumerators would forward these books to the Greffe for onward transmission to the Home Office via the Lt. Governor.

The enumerators were not to be paid the same rates as the UK “but the UK scales would be used as a basis for the payment.”

Shipping

Military and Civil Institutions were given separate “district” numbers, and shipping in port was included as a Shipping Schedule. There were 33 vessels, large and small and these included the Royal Naval Gunboat H.M.S. Mistletoe, Commander Henry William Ashton Littledale R.N., at anchor off Mont Orgueil Castle.

The French

Using the Census for the purposes of family history research after one hundred years, there are signs of a lack of general literacy and the discipline we have come to expect in a census today. Many minor errors are apparent from the very close study given by the C.I.F.H.S. For example, it was usual for a Frenchman, when required officially to give his name, to use Nom followed by Prenom. There was a large number of French-born inhabitants of Jersey in 1891 and when the Enumerator transcribed the schedules (written by someone within the subject's household) to his Census Return Book, the name was not always put in the correct order of “Names and Surnames”. Also initials were sometimes used instead of full names - although in some cases this may have been because the Enumerator just could not decipher the writing. The personal misspelling habits of individual Enumerators are also apparent, as these can lead to a possible misidentification of a family name.

The schedule numbers allocated by the Enumerator as he completed his return from the individual schedules of the Household Heads, are not always in strict geographical order and therefore will not show dwelling places as they would be following within a road or lane. The age given should be ‘at last birthday’ and there are a few instances of a baby's recorded age as two or three days, some weeks or months, which will allow a very close approximation of the actual birth date.

The Oldest Inhabitant

The oldest inhabitant of the Island in 1891 was the widow Charlotte Beckford who, at one hundred and three years old, was in the General Hospital enumerated as an inmate/pauper.

The study revealed both pathos and humour: the sad death on Census Day itself of Sarah, the wife of Francis de la Cour, in her fifty ninth year made a difference and heartsearching decision for the Enumerator. She was not included in the Census. The lady who gave, (and was recorded as such) her first name as “Mrs”; the Widow de Gruchy in St Peter, who revealed her eldest son, was named “Winter” and her second son, “Summer”...

Ladies and Their Ages

The British Press and Jersey Times on the 2nd April 1891, informed its readers that each schedule contained a promise, under the Name of the Home Secretary that “the facts will be published in general abstract only and strict care shall be taken that the returns are not used for other purposes than those of the Census.” The newspaper went on to assure “this would restore the equanimity of those ladies who were accused, probably wrongly, and certainly ungallantly of wilful, though weak, inaccuracy in the matters of recording that one delicate subject, their age”.

And went further to point out that, according to the National Review, the last census of 1881 had shown there were more girls aged 20-25 than could properly be accounted for...

Jersey in 1891 by Alex Glendinning

The census representation, submitted to Parliament two years after it was taken, shows that there were 54,518 people on the Island, of which 46% were men. As today, females outnumbered the males by 10%. Over the 10 years since the 1881 census the population had increased by 2,073 (4%).

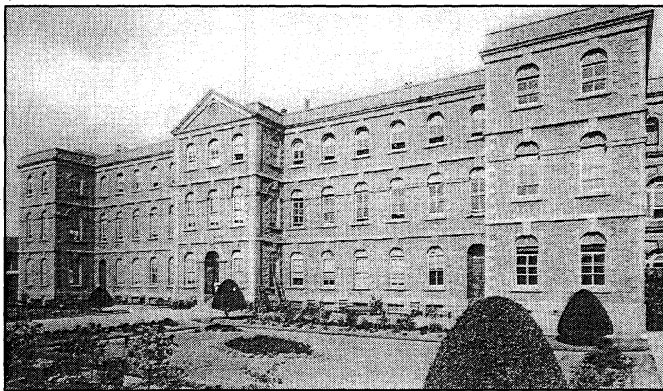

Unsurprisingly, St Helier contained the greatest number of individuals, 53.4% of the population. The next busiest parish being St Saviour, followed by St Martin and Grouville. The least populated was St Mary with 1,084 people.

Dwelling Places

A number of other statistical conclusions are reached in the Parliamentary report. There were 12,654 tenements in the entire Island, of which 7,068 were to be found in town.

The most common dwelling place for a family contained two rooms and were not as crowded as in previous censuses. Families of 12 or more were rarer, although there were still plenty with between six and eight members. There were 32 ships enumerated, containing 187 people, 180 in St Helier and seven in St Martin. Public institutions and barracks separately enumerated included the garrison at Fort Regent, numbering 489 individuals, 212 at Elizabeth Castle, two at St Aubin's Fort, 78 in St Mary's Barracks and 288 in St Peter's. Mentioned elsewhere, HM Gunboat Mistletoe had 59 men on board.

The institutions include the General Hospital, containing 318 individuals, 305 of which were paupers, patients and lunatics. The jail had 25 residents, 17 of which were inmates, the public lunatic asylum in St Saviour had 135 inmates and a private lunatic asylum in Grouville contained 19. St Brelade's hospital had 6 paupers and 2 staff and the General Dispensary and Infirmary, 4 patients and 4 staff.

Occupations

The occupations of men and women aged 10 years and upwards are listed. There were 104 civil servants, 14 policemen and 35 parish officials listed under the professional class, 14 of the civil servants were female. 1,131 men were engaged "in the defence of the country".

The Church had 52 Anglican clergymen, 10 Roman Catholic and 19 Independent ministers. On the female side there were 66 nuns and nine missionaries. The legal profession was exclusively male, 45 lawyers and 47 clerks. The same applies to the medical profession with the exception of nursing. We can find 54 physicians, 12 dentists and five veterinary surgeons, along with 149 nurses.

Women outnumbered the men in teaching 347 to 129, and in the literary and scientific fields, there were 11 men and only one woman.

Jersey was certainly well supplied with artists, 15 men and four women. Female musicians outnumbered the men 73 to 40. There were five male architects and 27 photographers, of which seven were women. Also under artists we can find two actors (one woman and one man) and seven male showmen.

The second list is of the domestic class, and here women outnumbered the men considerably, 2,801 to 118.

In the commercial class, there were 59 men and four women engaged in trade, three female brokers and 48 male, 167 male clerks and 11 secretaries. There were no female accountants, bankers or commercial travellers.

In transport, the railways accounted for the occupations of 71 men and the roads 569 men and two women. The sea provided a living to 738 men and 11 women. Unusually, one of the latter was a navigator.

Agriculture kept 3,800 men in a living and 455 women, there were 483 male gardeners and 11 women. 177 fishermen, all men, concluded the Agricultural and Fishing class.

This is followed by a small number of people in the industrial class which includes 104 printers, 16 enginefitters and eight scissor makers. Further down the list are 49 male watchmakers and one woman, six gunsmiths and 14 men who made their living making musical instruments.

Food and lodgings provided almost equal employment for men and women, 136 men and 186 women kept inns and lodging houses. Female tailors outnumber the men 417 to 273. Three men were engaged in dress making and 2,081 women.

Other occupations include 38 basket makers, 318 shoemakers and 287 blacksmiths. Seven women and 18 men worked as goldsmiths and there were 2,705 retired men and 11,905 retired women, usually referred to in the Census as "living on own means".

Places of Origin

The list of birth places shows over six and a half thousand people came from England, 821 from Guernsey, 933 from Ireland and 5,376 from France. 19 individuals were born at sea, one in China and three in Russia. Of the entire population, 230 are listed as mentally deranged, 73 blind, 54 deaf and 32 deaf and dumb.

Exports

Jersey exported 6,840 tons of potatoes in the year of the census, they earned the local farmers £487,642/1s/8d. In addition, 68 bulls and 1,2678 cows and heifers were sent abroad.

A record was also kept of the tourist season, showing total arrivals by ship as 42,803 people, the bulk of them arriving in August - 15,566. A modest amount considering the thousands that visit today, and for that matter the thousands earned by Jersey's potatoes.

Major Events

To find out what happened on a day by day basis in 1891 we can turn to the British Press and Jersey Times. As always, the New Year started with a Levée at Government House.
